

Code of Conduct

As a part of the JWOC team and community we will be working with each other for more than a month on various open-source projects, so there will be a huge diversity of skills, experiences and opinions. We value each of your individual opinion but we would value humble behavior more. Humble behavior includes:

- Be considerate and try to keep a considerate and helpful mentality because it is the main working principle of any community.
- Be respectful to others. At some point of time, you may not agree with others that is totally fine, but disagreement should not lead to any personal attack or poor behavior.
- Be careful with the words you choose, there are no such strict rules but we expect some level of professionals and you are an adult, you know what not to say
- We don't encourage either stalking or any kind of personal message to both of the mentors and fellows. If you think someone is violating the code of conduct, we encourage you to report it by mailing us at contact@jwoc2k20.tech
